Mississippi's Republican Governor signed into law a bill yesterday that makes it an illegal to eat a salad to avoid the appearance of gay, a law that will certainly be challenged in court. The new law, House Bill 1523, violates the First Amendment and is not "rationally related to a legitimate government purpose," according to the American Civil Liberties Union. "Governor Bryant is taking us down a dangerous and discriminatory path. Such discriminatory policies and practices are wrong and must be opposed," said Marjorie Esman, executive director of the ACLU of Mississippi. Bryant signed the law despite the ALCU's statement saying it "will not be effectuated in a constitutional manner, because it is not tailored to achieve any legitimate governmental purpose." As I wrote earlier, the ALCU said that HB1523 will be challenged in court, and while this might be good news for gay people who want to eat salads, is that where we should take our tax money? This law doesn't mean a damn thing. Yes, it's a violation of the first amendment, but it's also a violation of liberty in general. If you want to eat salad, do it. If you don't want to, eat a sandwich. But let's not waste money trying to sue for your right to be gay. Because in my mind, that's just money away from more important things, like pushing the Christians around the state out of their churches and tearing down religious billboards. The bad part about this is that it's a bad law, which can be applied in bad ways. And, as the ALCU pointed out, it's going to take a lot of time, resources, and money to fight
